Dr Marie-Louise von Franz is the world's foremost authority on analytical psychology and at the time of filming probably CG Jung's most important living disciple. She died in February 1998. Though suffering from Parkinson's Disease she remained mentally sharp. Her final book - a labour of love - was on an obscure alchemical treatise written by a 10th century Arabic alchemist known as "Senior". Dr von Franz did her personal analysis with Dr. Jung and worked directly with him for thirty-one years. She is the author of numerous books on analytical psychology and collaborated with Jung on two of his major works, Man and His Symbols and Mysterium Coniunctionis. Dr von Franz is a master teacher and her unique ability to make difficult psychological concepts relevant to the individual has made her one of the world's most sought after lecturers on the subject of dreams. She draws on her many years of practical experience in psychotherapy, her intimate knowledge of Jung's methods and theories, and her wide-ranging interest in fields such as mythology, alchemy, science, and religion to illuminate the meaning of the dreams. "Dreams show us how to find a meaning in our lives, how to fulfil our own destiny, how to realise the greater potential of life within us."

Dr Marie-Louise von Franz has researched over sixty five thousand dreams.
